Summary:
I am responsible and passionate, interested in IT and everything related to it. I recently started doing web programming, application development and website building, but after taking the courses I realized that I didn't like it very much, although I finished the courses the best in the group. After watching, partially studying the informational videos about testing, I became interested in this direction, since my current work is connected precisely with the search for truth, shortcomings, or something that is not immediately visible. I am looking for a company willing to offer me a place among their testers. In turn, I fulfill all my obligations and will be a good and friendly addition to your team. Therefore, now I am looking for a job or an internship as a software tester.
